The proclamation granting a general former proclamations, which has been time past, was issued yesterday and will be found in our news columns this morning. This is the last card Mr. Johnson has to play for the nomination at New York and it will not win. He has been very useful to the Democratic party, indeed it was he who brought the corpse to life after it was laid out at Appomattox, but the party has no use for him beyond his present term; and such is their party depravity that the Managers which was ordered to be time past, was issued yesterday and sense of owing him a debt of gratitude Serge Congress Slippers, only sharpens their malice against him. The Southern rebels never can forgive Johnson the crime of having been a "poor white." He wont do for their president. Therefore he wont do

The Alaska Purchase-New Senator Tax Bill-Adjournment. Washington, July 1, 1868.

Editors Intelligencer: Editors Intelligencer:

The Russian American purchase is still under consideration in the House. General Banks' report, some days ago, attracted very marked attention, and tended in no small degree to increase expectation for something of still greater interest when the distinguished chairman should speak to the report. The Senate on yesterday admitted Senator Osborn, of Florida, to a seat in that body. The new Senator is rather a young looking man, not perhaps over 35 years old and is said to be a native of the State of New York. He has a fine military record, as an artillery officer, and served in the army of the Potomac, and also with Sherman in his famous march to the sea. At the time of his election he was United States Marshall for the State of Florida. If I am not much mistaken, the country will know more of the gallant Senator, as he is evidently a young man of promise. more of the gallant Senator, as he is evidently a young man of promise.

The tax bill from the House is still under consideration in the Senate Finance Committee. It is not thought the Committee will recommend any material changes, and may report the bill to-morrow.

The members are getting anxious to leave for home, and every indication points to the speedy winding up of the session.

The weather is exceedingly warm. THE Washington correspondent o

He is a man of changeable appearance. On the floor of Congress he looks large, dignified, and statesmanlike, his face being always composed, his eyes placid, mild, intellectuality expressed in his brows and mouth, and his garb plain and citizenlike. He has dark auburn hair, a light complexion, alightly freckied, and soft white hands. But I have seen Hendricks in the street, under the full daylight, looking decidedly unlike a statesman. Then his skin has a dirty look, his hair seems lustreless, his features, re-HANDLAN, JORDAN & CO.,

New York, July 3,—The excitement is increasing hourly. Pendleton's friends are lond in their expressions of confidence in his nomination, claiming that he is the only candidate they can elect. They oppose Hendricks and some say they will bolt Chase. Seymour is their second choice. It is believed that they control over one hundred and sixty votes. Wash McLeon and Judge Flynn, of Cincinnati, had a private interview with Seymour, Tilden, Church and Green, of New York. Pendleton is not to be pressed to a split. It is very likely that Seymour will be nominated by acclamation before six ballots and forced to accept. A letter from the New York bankers urges him to accept. The Southern delegates favor Johnson, but will accept the candidate and promise to work and vote for his election. Hendricks' friends are confident that if, Seymour be nominated, Hendricks or Blair will be Yole President. To-day Hancock seems nowhere.

The firmness of the manufacters in holding on to their fabrics has induced an anxiety on the fabrics has induced an anxiety on the part of the large jobbing-houses to lay in stocks while prices rule low. The consequence has been some heavy transactions, and, in cases of certain standard styles, an advance to one-half to a cent a yard. Some of the jobbers, for hot weather, and have succeeded in working off the remnants of their Spring purchases. There is generally a very confident feeling in relation to the future, and the highly encouraging crop reports from all the great agricultural districts give cause for none but favorable anticipations for the Fall business.
